Blood Bound Additional Rules

This section explains a few additional rules to the game.

Tabletalk

Players may freely discuss the game, conspire with other players, or make open accusations against one another. However, players cannot converse with one another in secret; all such communication must remain public for all players to hear.

Ability Cards

card.

When an ability instructs a player to give an ability card to another player, he takes that card from the supply and gives it to the player of his choice, who places it next to his own character card.

Most ability cards are open information and remain faceup. The Inquisitor's curse cards are an exception to this rule.

Reference Card

The reference card contains important gameplay reminders, including each character's ability, each character's combination of tokens, and a summary of each ability card.
